ISSUE NO. 10

The Nazi-Cocaine Connection

BY: E. Edwin Austin
(MUTILATION DATA CENTER)

The final conclusions of this report are based partly on my own research. The key item, which ties everything together is the book "COCAINE, It's History, Uses and Effects" by Richard Ashley (Warner Books, New York, 1975). All page numbers in this report which appear with no other data are from this book. Although never intended for such usage, you can use this book to correlate a whole library full of books to build a clear picture of the deliberate use of cocaine as a population control drug that is used by several government agencies. It costs little or no tax money, and is therefore beyond the control of Congress.

The book is heavily pro-cocaine. And yet, if you read it carefully, it is the most damning evidence against cocaine you will ever see. If cocaine's most vociferous defender ends up condemning the drug, then he gets my full attention. Particularly since cocaine is the most readily available street drug in the U.S. at the moment -- a persistent drug that surfaces periodically throughout U.S. history.

Clinically, cocaine is a "euphoric." It puts the user into a happy "don't-give-a-damn" mood. It also acts as a sexual stimulant, and gives the user more energy and better coordination in physical activity. It is cheap, and easily produced by the unskilled labor that process coca leaves in most of South America (p.171).

The drug is a "natural" for population control, used to suppress discontent. It is so attractive to an oppressed population that they will buy it themselves, thereby financing their own control without the use of tax money. In its raw coca leaf form, the Aztecs and Incas used it in exactly that manner (p 81).

Unfortunately, Ashley does not ask the obvious: Is it possible that widespread use of cocaine also suppressed the kind of discontent that leads to scientific breakthroughs such as the use of the wheel ---even after their own kids invented it? Is it possible that cocaine put the armies into such a "don't-give-a-damn" mood that they stood idly by while a tiny band of Spanish marauders walked through them? Could this be the influence that destroyed highly sophisticated cities and urban societies, a puzzle that even today is beyond the abilities of archeologists to solve?

Uncontrolled access to cocaine almost universally brings with it progressively larger dosages as users seek to increase their pleasure (p 173-174). Eventually, the user OD's. An OD produces "undue aggressiveness" (p 181), impulsive acts without regard to the consequences (p 172), and in extreme cases, paranoia (p 171). Add sexual stimulation, and you have a set of characteristics so strikingly similar to mass murderers, rapists and child molesters, that I went back to the files. Since I never built a file on rape and molestation, there is nothing. But I did find that out of the 50-plus mass murderers on file, all but three, possibly four, were cocaine abusers at the time the crimes were committed. The use of amphetamines seems to be there as well.

Based on this book, I see it like this: The upper and middle levels of any population are under low stress and are stable individuals to begin with. For these people, Ashley's thesis that cocaine is a "safe" drug is probably valid. However, there is a long-term effect that will be discussed later. One thing is certain. Neither Ashley's files nor mine reveal any socially disruptive effect in the short term from this level's use of cocaine.

As you progress downward through the population, you encounter progressively larger numbers of extreme poor, mental patients, criminals, followers of unpopular religions and political dissidents. This is a population under stress. Allow them access to cocaine, and they go for it like a dog on a juicy bone. It is precisely this effect that makes cocaine such an effective agent to suppress a restive population -- with the victims buying the stuff at inflated prices that provide the social manipulator a huge profit.

This is where you get psychological addiction and persistent overdoses as users seek relief from stress. This is where you get your rapists, child molesters and murderers. I emphasize here that the key is not social or economic status -- it is stress, which crosses every ethnic social, economic, racial, political and religious line. At least among mass murderers, brain and physical deformity appear as the source of high stress in at least some cases.

The Arab world uses marijuana to suppress dissent, exactly the same that cocaine is supposed to work. But an OD does not produce the aggressively violent individual that cocaine does. Rather, the persistent OD brings vegetation and a quiet death. The Latin world uses booze in the same way, with results almost identical to marijuana. The Oriental world uses opium and heroin for this purpose, again with almost identical results.

The most fascinating aspect is the use of booze for this purpose in the U.S., within the framework of social and legal acceptance except for a short period. Why, then, this sudden shift to cocaine with it's easily demonstrable social destructiveness. For that, I must turn to some political history.

During the 1920's and 30's, a group of international robber barons banded together and tried to arm disgruntled workers so they could be built into an army and take over governments who were hostile to the abuses of the rich. The most likely impetus was the unexpected establishment of a worker-controlled government in Russia.

In the U.S., this movement was controlled mostly by the Mellon and Pew Families. For their demagogue, they selected retired Marine General Smedley Butler, who led the Bonus March on Washington. Butler was far too smart for their obvious treason -- and blew the whistle on them. (See "The Plot To Seize The White House" by Jules Archer, Hawthorne Books, 1973.)

Reading between the lines, I am convinced that Franklin Roosevelt knew exactly who was planning what and was sitting back waiting until the plot developed to the point where he could hang some people. But, Butler blew the whistle prematurely, leading to a Congressional investigation that stopped the plot short of prosecutable treason. (ibid)

Only in Germany and Italy did the plotters succeed in putting their "front men" into power. At this point, a political axiom comes into play. The plotters were trying to attract competent, controllable demagogues from another element of the population. "Natural Law" prohibits. If they attract anyone at all, they get psychotics who quickly become uncontrollable once in power. Hitler and Mussolini are classic examples.

Horried, the robber barons in the U.S., France, England and other intended victims of the plot quickly neutralized the conspirators among their number and joined forces with an infuriated Roosevelt and other intended victims to stomp Hitler and Mussolini into the ground.

At this point, a major mistake was made -- the Nuremberg Trials. Military officers, bureaucrats, and all kinds of functionaries in government, saw themselves hung now if they refused to follow a patently offensive order, or hung later if they didn't.. (Research the Nuremberg Trials, especially in any major law library.)

A massive world-wide effort then developed to save the remaining Nazis. Four groups of Nazis developed out of this. One group went to the CIA for it's intelligence value. A second went to the KGB for the same reason. A third escaped and was given political refugee status in the Middle East. The fourth -- the group important to this report -- escaped to South America and was given political refuge.

All four groups kept their noses clean and eventually settled into relatively stable niches. The two refugee groups were welcomed with open arms because of their industrial know-how, which was desperately needed by the host countries to free themselves of the near-slave status imposed by mega-buck agricultural companies in England, France, Spain, Portugal, and the U.S. (See "Peron, A Biography" --Random House, 1983)

The Nazi refugee groups acquired considerable political influence in the host countries, as their industrial expertise made itself felt. Their sympathizers in both the U.S. and Russia coalesced into a strong underground pro-Nazi bloc that permeated both governments. This is especially strong in the Military, where the KGB Nazis and the CIA Nazis became, in effect, group double agents, each passing the other intelligence information so they could retain their special favored status.

All four groups maintained close contact using a variety of communications systems. With the strong sympathy from the middle level functionaries in all Allied governments, there was some clandestine travel. For example, Klaus Barbie is known to have traveled to the U.S. with CIA/FBI help, using several aliases. (See media items about Barbie. There was a minor scandal about this.)

Left to itself, natural political healing processes would have converted the remaining Nazis from a social cancer to a social asset. However, they were not left to natural processes. Instead, Israeli agents kidnapped Adolph Eichmann out of Argentina, and took him to Israel to be murdered after a propaganda show-trial. This was such a blatant flouting of international and jurisdiction law that it angered much of the world and set in motion a series of events that may well destroy our society and others with it.

Freed of the shackles of refugee status by the anger that followed this event, The Nazis promptly organized a secret government in exile that is believed to be housed somewhere in Paraguay. In this, they have the gleeful support of their sympathizers who remember the danger they saw to themselves in the Nuremburg Trials. This is not an ordinary government in exile. Rather, it is a frightened government who sees assassins behind every bush --justifiably, from what I read in the media. They are experienced, aggressive and warlike, not prone to stand idly by and wring their hands in anguish while some assassin stalks them with a gun.

The principal difference between the Nazi government in exile and others is that, beginning with the Eichmann kidnapping/murder, the Nazis have built themselves into a rudimentary world government that enforces it's decrees more effectively than the UN. The structure is unique. The methods are a unique combination of older technologies. They bear examination.

No government in exile has a tax base. Most support themselves below political starvation level with a combination of their "official's" private investment income and a trickle of contributions from sympathizers. The Nazis are unique in experience with the use of drugs to emasculate their enemy at a huge profit to their government (p 114). What is more natural than that they would turn to drugs as a substitute for a tax base?

They would be attracted to this source of income by sitting on the world's two largest supplies of drugs -- heroin in the Middle East, and cocaine in South America. The icing on the cake would be short-sighted decadent governments more than passing tolerant of drugs, themselves emasculated into near-anarchy by large-scale drug abuse among their own officials.

Both drugs appear world-wide as a source of income to the Nazis. But why does cocaine occupy the predominant position? I submit that the Nazis are nothing if not smart. Why wouldn't they give priority to a drug that takes out both the user and two or three others, over a different drug that takes out only the user? Why wouldn't they use a drug that they know full well has an emasculating effect on the society and it's institutions, over a drug that attracts at the most a tiny group who exert little or no influence? If nothing else, cocaine's "recreational use by middle and upper level individuals" promises a far greater profit for their treasury.

Whatever the reason, countless media articles make it clear that the Nazis began to use cocaine and heroin as a source of governmental income, distributing it through their own network, using sympathizers in the CIA to help smuggle it into Iron Curtain countries, and the KGB to smuggle it into the U.S., England, France, Israel and the rest of the Allied World.

The Nazis are smart and politically astute -- more than enough to realize that drug smuggling is a dangerous and temporary source of income. By re-investing the profits in respectable mainstream enterprises, they assure themselves of permanent income. Taking figures given by France, England, Israel, Russia, and the U.S., I make their permanent income to be in the high millions, possibly the low billions. This is certainly sufficient to make them dangerous as a war-like power if they so choose. Corroborative indicators raise a major question that they are doing exactly that.

The thesis that the Nazis are involved in drug smuggling is hardly open to question. (See especially Family Weekly, a Sunday newspaper supplement, June 12, 1983, for a long article about Klaus Barbie's drug smuggling, and mention of frequent visits to U.S. with CIA/FBI help during this period. See Los Angeles Times, August 17, 1983 for article about U.S. helping Barbie evade arrest for war crimes in France. Throughout all of this literature, the theme of establishing a world government and the theme of huge amounts of money appear. I have a dozen or more contacts inside this group, who are unanimous in saying that, following the death of his wife and son, Barbie refused to contribute his share to the central Nazi treasury and was extradited for this, not because of anti-drug attitude in Bolivia. More recent information indicates a battle for control of cocaine, rather than a genuine attempt to eliminate it from U.S. markets)

My thesis that the profits are used by the Nazis for war-like purposes depends on the existence of several corroborative factors, plus the existence of counter-measures by the intended victims.

The "Werewolf Corps" is an important part of Nazi strategy. Originally organized by Fritz Klappe in the early 30's, this is an assassination/terrorist network who terrorize "enemy" officials by murdering their families in the most brutal way possible. They then tell others to watch out or the same will happen to their own families. Those who cannot be intimidated are themselves brutally murdered. (See "Man Into Wolf, An Anthropological Interpretation of Sadism, Masochism and Lycanthropy" by Robert Eisler, Footnote 127, Routledge and Kegan Paul -1951.) [This footnote is reproduced as Appendix B at the conclusion of this article --Editor]

The Werewolf Corps was taken over by Martin Bormann, who used violent felons and mental patients as assassins and terrorists. There is dispute over whether Bormann escaped to South America, and is now in Paraguay, or was killed trying. But there can be little question of the existence of a Nazi-associated duplicate -- in fact, several -- of the Werewolf Corps in operation right now.

The Turkish Gray Wolves -- who freed Agca to take a shot at the Pope -- are an exact duplicate of the Nazi Werewolf Corps. Bulgarian/KGB financial support and involvement may be pure propaganda from Nazis inside Italy or may be real. Either would be consistent with Werewolf Corps MO, particularly in light of the existence of a large group of Nazi refugees under the control of the KGB.

Inside the U.S., Donald Flickenger, a Minneapolis Alcohol, Tax and Firearms Agent, made a reluctant investigation of cattle mutilations and found a near-duplicate of the Werewolf Corps. He mentions a "death list" of prominent Americans and describes animal and human mutilation-killings which go beyond drug psychosis to include "political, religious and racial overtones." The specific overtones follow Nazi philosophy exactly.

Like the Thugs in India, the Mau Mau in Africa, the Assassins in the Arab World, and their counterparts elsewhere, the Werewolf MO includes pseudo-cult ritual. There is a peculiar group of mass murders which combine government-connected victims with apparent cult ritual. The peculiarities include similarities in the rituals based on a numerology that includes 3,13,23, 30/31 and the corresponding letters of the alphabet, C,M, and W. Double initials and associative doubling of initials also play a part, especially doubling of C,M, and W in some cases. Thus, to get included on my list, the killer must combine government-associated victims with at least part of the cult format to be considered "Werewolf Corps MO."

Ted Bundy's victims are almost 100% government associated. He drove 50 miles to kill the daughter of a Police Chief. He drove 150 miles to make a thwarted attack on the daughter of the Chief of Detectives at Jacksonville, Florida. In Colorado, he killed the sister of a Jacksonville police officer. His first known victim was the girlfriend of a Deputy Sheriff in the Seattle area. Many of his victims were double initial cases. Other Colorado victims included two who were connected into Oregon officialdom -- one of them a prosecuting attorney. (See "The Stranger Beside Me" by Ann Rule --1980.)

Richard Chase's (The Vampire Killer) first victim was a Bureau of Land Management Surveyer Supervisor. From there, he dropped into a 3-13-23 and multiple initial format. There is a strong Nazi theme in the Chase case, with Chase constantly talking about Nazis killing people in the Sacramento area. He even provided a list of people that he accused of involvement. The presence of the Manson Family, connections into the Oroville Manson/Nazi group, all lend sufficient credence to Chase's statements that someone should have made an honest effort to look into some of the verifiable material -- which was never done.

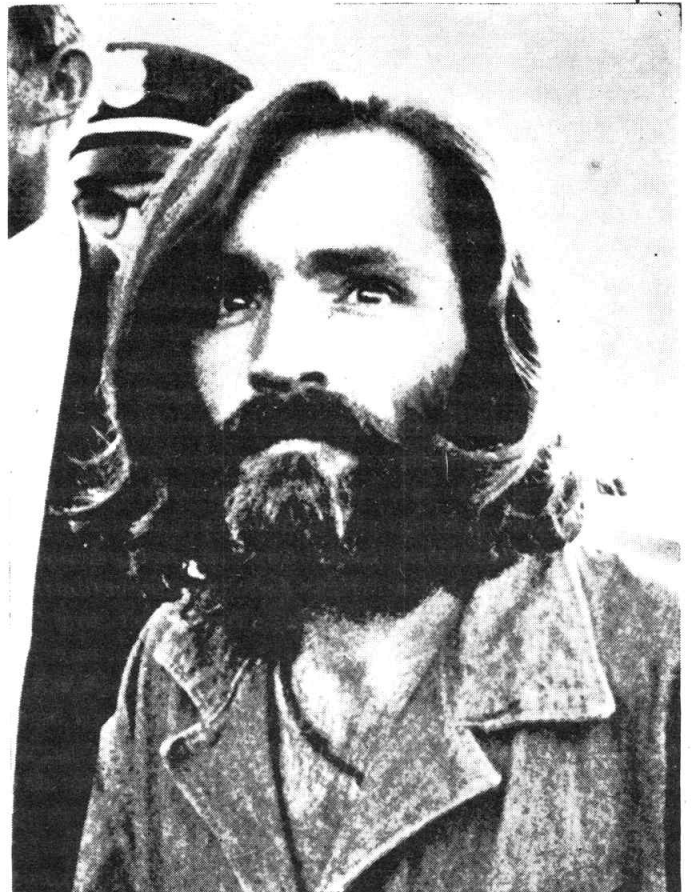

Once past his first murder (Ambrose Griffin, the Surveyer Supervisor), things really got weird. Chase's next victim was Ieresa Wallin who lived on Iioga Way. W is the 23rd letter of the alphabet. She was 23 years old when killed on the 23rd of January. His last two victims, killed simultaneously, were Evelyn Miroth and Dan Meridith who lived on Merrywood Drive. M is the 13th letter of the alphabet.

His calendar was taken on warrant and entered into the court records. The calendar is all marked up with the words "this day" written across the 3rd, 13th, 23rd and 30/31st of every month. This provides us with a rare glimpse into the immediate pre-murder mind of an otherwise ordinary drug-riddled psychotic mass killer.

Kenneth Bianchi's first four victims were little girls with double initials 3-13-23 related. One was the daughter of a family who was somehow connected with the Secret Service. (See "The Double Initial Murders" by Michael Hoffman in Fortean Times #35 or in CT #9. See also "The Hillside Strangler" by Ted Schwarz, Doubleday, 1981.)

Most interesting of all is Charles Manson. Victim Sharon Tate was the daughter of an Army Intelligence officer. Another probable victim, Nancy Warren, was the wife of a California Highway Patrol officer. Manson was the most notorious of all killer-cult leaders. His Nazi leanings and police/Hollywood connections are well known. It is virtually common knowledge that most of his killings were simply the suppression of drug-traffic competitors.

CHARLES MANSON

(Wide World

It is his Nazi connections and his two government-connected victims that put him on my list, rather than his cultism. Manson had a death list of prominent people. One of the unexplored oddities is his possession and expenditure of huge sums of money. Like the police involved, I tend to credit this to drug profits, but a nagging doubt must remain. Another oddity is the trip to Texas by his chief trusted lieutenant, Tex Watson, and persistent rumors that Watson turned over Manson's snuff-films to local law, who have either destroyed them or keep them under lock and key, refusing to turn them over to anyone.

What sets Manson apart from all others is the fact that he organized and led two Manson-cults from his prison cell after the reduction of his sentence to life in prison. One of these was led by Perry Warthan and was openly Nazi. Warthan and one of his followers are in prison for murder, having killed a police informant who had infiltrated them. (Register, Santa Ana, California, two articles, beginning December 11, 1982. The second article on the 12th includes a photo of Warthan and Manson together, taken during a prison visit)

The other Manson cult was led by James Mason in Chillicothe, Ohio. It was guided by Manson from his prison cell, but little else is known about this cult.

Taken together, these cases provide strong circumstantial evidence that the descendants of the Werewolf Corps are alive and operating inside the U.S. -- killing and terrorizing anti-drug and/or anti-Nazi officials.

The corroboration is voluminous and ranges from an apparent terrorist warning to a U.S. Senator who was conducting hearings on cattle mutilations, followed by the takeover of the investigations by the FBI and their subsequent suppression. There is a mass murder near Mansfield, Ohio, which includes the wife of a Deputy Sheriff and the apparent assassination of what is almost certainly an armed Communist assassin. I was led by the nose to this group by information taken from the MacDonald killings in Fayetteville, N.C. (Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, not the Congressman.) There are several obvious "frames" of anti-drug public officials including two Sheriffs. It goes on and on, always Nazi or drug related. Sometimes both.

For my thesis of the Nazi government in exile waging war, there must be actual military action. At first glance, this appears impossible because a government in exile cannot raise an external army, and there are no obvious signs of a Nazi army.

But you can get the same effect by putting exotic weapons in the hands of Nazi terrorists. An Atomic Bomb is a weapon of mass destruction that lends itself to this kind of war. Chemical/biological warfare is another mass killing weapon that terrorists would find attractive.

Cattle and pet mutilations show obvious signs of being chemical and/or biological warfare experiments with delivery systems. I make about 40% of livestock mutilations and 5% to 10% of urban pet mutilations falling into this category. The livestock experiments would have to do with anti-food CBW warfare, a U.S. innovation tested on a large scale in Viet Nam. The pets would be used as a "vector" to carry lethal diseases to humans. (See Saturday Review, November 10, 1979, p 10, for an editorial stating facts about a series of such experiments, using a "harmless" disease that killed several people, conducted by various U.S. Military agencies.)

There is one especially fascinating case from Los Angeles where a man named Sadowski has been convicted of mutilating and killing cats. He was experimenting with the effects of chemicals on cats, among other things. There is a mystery figure in the background, furnishing Sadowski with free vehicles to travel. (Sources, interviews with investigating officer, Rosie Kimberlin, information gleaned from other researchers and California DMV records, which show clear indications of acquisition of sudden wealth, furnished by the mystery figure.)

In the U.S., CBW experimentation was brought to a sudden halt by public and Congressional hostility following secret experiments on human subjects without their knowledge, by elements of the U.S. Military. (See Saturday Review article.) This quite naturally generated fear and panic among researchers who (correctly in my opinion) saw Russia forging ahead and becoming genuinely dangerous to us in this field. With a network of combined sympathizers and actual Nazis long in place, these researchers are a natural recruiting ground for Nazis with the money to secretly finance continued research, free of GAO scrutiny.

It is my opinion that this experimentation is the source of those animal mutilations which show signs of CBW experimentation, the "silent helicopters" and other UFO trappings.

For my thesis to be valid, there must be non-murder terrorism and other low-level activity. Drug traffic points are rife with terrorism. Silent helicopters chase and harass cops and citizens along major drug corridors. Due to a peculiarity of American law, Indian Reservations can legally engage in drug traffic -- which they do, killing any Indian who stands in opposition. (Voluminous media sources and private correspondence from all over the U.S.) Indian Reservations are prime targets for cattle mutilator-killers. Apparently this is an attempt to frighten off potential renters of Indian land (for cattle raising purposes) -- and thus reduce Indian tribal income and make them more dependent on drug smuggling for income. (The Sioux are going through this in early 1984. Attempts to investigate are systematically thwarted by BIA/FBI interference. Nearby White law has been harr-assed by silent helicopters.)

For my overall thesis to be correct, there must be a major split in the U.S. government on the subject of cocaine. This is a very old and well known population control drug when it is introduced into a restive segment of the population under control of the manipulator. This is going to attract the attention of a large segment of military and police who want to use it to control problem individuals and groups. As with any other group, there will be subgroups who believe in the stuff so strongly that they will not hesitate to violate criminal law and their own supervisors to get the stuff and use it.

Such groups do exist. I have personal knowledge of an FBI drug smuggling operation -- information obtained after the murder of one of my men -- that feeds marijuana and cocaine into the counter-culture in two states. There is a Bureau of Land Management operation in Western Colorado that reeks of drug smuggling, according to local law who are blocked from investigations. There is an aircraft operating company who runs craft all over the U.S. without numbers on them, and the FAA says they are not allowed to investigate them. There are dozens of obvious drug laundering operations that cannot be touched. I no longer question Federal involvement in cocaine smuggling, for the specific purpose of using it as a population control drug to suppress discontent, the same way the stuff was fed to slaves prior to the Civil War.

Ronald Reagan looms large in this. As Governor of California he tried to get funds from the Legislature to perform mind control experiments that included large-scale screening of the population to locate dissident individuals to experiment on. Even though denied this source, he succeeded in establishing a major intelligence-gathering system that operates to this day through the school system, and large scale mind control intervention which is used primarily against dissident students in the school systems. His proposal now operates nationwide. I regard it as no coincidence that these same students turn up all over the media as cocaine abusers. (See "Mind Control" by Peter Schrag.)

You can bet your last farthing that the "untouchable" drug rings, especially those operated by Federal agencies, are not about to get "busted" so long as Reagan remains in office! Furthermore, there is a strange and wonderful silence from Mondale on this subject. The hard truth is that any attempt to control this type of cocaine abuse is beyond control. Any attempt to eliminate it will be stamped out by Federal law enforcement agencies or Federal military intelligence agents --even if they have to send in a CIA agent with a gun!

Reagan's action is consistent with a high level of knowledge about cocaine and it's siblings, the amphetamines. Introduced into a large population without control, cocaine drives masses of users into what amounts to political and military lethargy. This is the effect that may have destroyed the Aztecs and Incas. It almost certainly did just that to the French Army when the Germans smuggled it to them (See pps 114-115.) To succeed, Reagan must remove cocaine from the upper and middle levels of society and substitute other drugs such as alcohol and heroin for cocaine at the lower levels. To get that done, he must stamp out the Nazi centers in South America and the Middle East. He is trying to do just those things. His tactics are beginning to appear.

He is restoring CBW research. In so doing, he removes a key segment of government from Nazi control. If he can keep it clean instead of allowing the Military to dirty things up with secret experiments on unknowing civilians, this may prove to be a key change.

Reagan is running a hard-nosed cocaine war inside the U.S., which has only a little effect, but in the long run may be the final nail in the Nazi coffin. He will also have to remove the Nazi-associated John Birch Society.

Reagan is trying to extradite Nazi war criminals, reinstituting many long dormant proceedings. Along with this, Reagan is reducing the CIA Nazi faction to a nullity. He is systematically removing drug abuse from the Military. In this he has the full support of the more knowledgeable military commanders, right down to old-time enlisted men, all of whom see the dangers that appear with cocaine abuse.

The key factor is this: Reagan does not need cocaine for population control, with all it's socially destructive side effects. For certain severe situations, such as prisoners in high security prisons and on Death Row, he has amphetamines synthesized in this country. These are under medical control to some degree, and their side effects are less destructive. For less severe situations, such as restive elements, he already has alcohol and can eventually legalize marijuana for those who choose euphoric drugs over revolt. By using these methods, Reagan can free his own mind control proponents of the necessity of a Nazi-controlled cocaine supply.

Along these lines, Reagan is financing very effective cocaine wars in the source nations. Billions of dollars worth of processing equipment, the drug itself, and transport systems have been destroyed or taken under local government control. Given another term, Reagan will make genuine inroads into drug control, setting up a controllable situation in the U.S.

As I see it, Reagan is making one major mistake. In this situation, a mistake could spell the difference between success and failure. He is not cooperating with Russia. The man is just too anti-Communist paranoid to see that one can ally with Russia against a common enemy -- just as Roosevelt allied with Russia against the same enemy in WW2. You must admit that a combined Russian-British-U.S. Navy task force entering into a Chilean harbor and issuing an ultimatum would be a powerful incentive to justify a Chilean roundup of Nazi war criminals.

Ultimately, one of two things are going to happen. Either we will stamp out the Nazi-Cocaine connection, or we will go down to a Nazi takeover.

At this stage in our history, we face a Hobson's choice. If Reagan wins another term, we will see a radical reduction in drugs and associated crime, at the expense of a robber-baron economy that will drive the citizenry into a revolt. If the Democrats win, we will see a wimpy bunch of effete snobs who will allow a backslide into drug-riddled near anarchy of the kind that existed under Carter -- which will probably drive the citizenry into a rightist revolt, followed by a leftist revolt, both along the lines of the Napoleonic Era in France.

APPENDIX A

Since this report was written in early 1984, there have been more developments.

(1) Take an animal mutilation in a rural area. Draw a two mile radius circle on a county map. Draw another, same radius, around the livestock owner's home. Somewhere in one of these two circles, you will find a place where all kinds of scruffy-looking characters come and go at all hours of the day and night. That is a major drug activity point, where local drug dealers pick up their junk from a wholesaler. It is the source of the mutilation. If you investigate, you will find that over 90% of farm owners with mutilated livestock are outspokenly anti-drug people who have publicly stated their views on the subject. This is not terrorism as such. Rather, a druggie gets stoned and then decides to cut up the cow of the guy who has been stating his anti-drug views.

(2) The weird-light-at-night UFO is proving to be one of two things. (a) Light aircraft, owned by small groups of drug abusers, painted black on the bottom, with lights that are switched in weird patterns. They are flown at night to divert attention from very large drug movements. One such group was recently exposed on Long Island, New York, by local police who caught and examined the aircraft at a local airport -- near the "satanic cult" who tortured, mutilated and murdered a teenage boy. (See CT #8, Conspiracy Notes Section under heading "Ritual Killing In New York.") They are in reality a drug-cult. The other weird light-at-night is a Hughes 500C helicopter, specially engineered to run silently and used all over Viet Nam. They are readily available surplus. One was busted recently near Moore Haven, Florida, caught by a deputy in the act of offloading $173 million in cocaine off a twin engine aircraft near a remote rural road. There have been UFO sightings nearby. The lights -- as with conventional aircraft -- are mounted under the chopper, which is usually painted solid black, and switched around to cause a weird effect. They are used to divert and, in some cases, to buzz police and citizens who get too close to the major drug movement. You will find the especially common near the borders of Indian Reservations, where drugs are stored and distributed 100% legally, under court rulings which say the Indians are sovereign and can do as they please about drugs.

(3) All the major drug corridors are using "born again Christian" storefront churches with common church names. One of the most common is the use of "Abundant Life" (usually "Fellowship"). It is absolutely vital that everyone concerned recognize that these are exactly the same people doing exactly the same thing -- i.e. druggies using religion as "cover." They did the same with WICCA, Odinism, Gaian Pantheism, and Paganism. Since the early 60's, they have used "Satanism" the same way.

APPENDIX B

From the book "Man Into Wolf" by Robert Eisler, Routledge and Kegan Paul -1951. Footnote 127: The GERMAN WEREWOLF ORGANIZATION, AND THE MAFIA.

According to The Times and Manchester Guardian News Service from Stockholm, 3 April 1945, quoting a Berlin report, the 'Werewolves' were organized by a certain Fritz Klappe at Halle in 1923 on the model of the Sicilian Mafia. (Editor's Note: The Mafia was formed by Giuseppe Mazzini, top man in the Jewish dominated Carbonari, which had direct continuity with the Order of the Illuminati.) Statistics of their exploits were compiled in Dr. E.J.Gumbel's books on political murder in Germany between the two wars (Zwei Jahre Mord, Berlin, Verlag Neues Vaterland), 1921, Preface by Prof. G.F Nicolai; Vier Jahre politischer Mord, Berlin (Malik), 1922; Verschwörer, Vienna (Malik), 1924, p. 65 on the Stahlhelm -- 'the nationalist war-veterans' organization -- and the 'Werewolves' intended to absorb civilian conspirators under the black flag adorned with the white skull and crossbones; p.73 on the corresponding youth-leagues of 'Eagles' and 'Falcons'; cf. below p.223, note 213, and see op. cit., p.56, on a number of group portraits of the male and female members of these organizations taken together in the nude, found when one of their leaders, a bookseller Grenz in Oldenburg, was arrested by the Weimar Government; cf. below, note 233, on the German nudist movement. These 'werewolves' were resuscitated by Dr. Goebbels (The Times, 28 May, 1945, p.5, last col., by Military Correspondent lately in Germany) as an underground resistance movement after the Second World War. They operated 'secret' broadcasting station of their own in 1945. They murdered Franz Oppenhoff, anti-Nazi Roman Catholic Mayor of Aachen, and four other burgomasters, and boasted of other political assassinations, even in U.S.A. prison camps. Their chief was Otto Skorzeny (Curt Riess, The Leader, 26 May 1945) leader of the airborne commando raid which liberated Mussolini, under the supreme command of the journalist Pflugk-Harttung, a son of the well-known historian of that name. With or under him served General Daluege, successor to the assassinated Heinrich in Bohemia, Dr. Ernst Kaltenbrunner, former head of the Nazi security police intelligence office, Gauleiter Frank and a declassé Count Bassewitz (Daily Mail, 5 April 1945 from Stockholm). According to Walter Farr, Daily Mail, 20 April 1945, their badge was a black armband with skull and crossbones and S.S. in silver. According to the News Chronicle of 19 April 1945, a band of female werewolves with the same badge and a W below the skull and crossbones was organized in Leipzig to pour scalding water from the windows on troops passing below them. A considerable number of soldiers of the French occupation army were killed by 'werewolves' in the Grand Duchy of Baden (Daily Mail, 29 August, 1945). Picture Post, 18 May, 1946, printed a letter from W.E.Lawrence of Gateshead reporting that a wreath of flowers recently laid on the 'secret' grave of Mussolini bore the inscription 'We shall avenge you. The wolves are awaiting their chance to spring'. Some further details on the German 'werewolves' are published in H.R.Trevor Roper's "The Last Days of Hitler", London (Macmillan), 1947, p.50. Their central office was controlled by one Prutzmann, 'vain, idle and boastful'...At Nuremberg, Speer and Fritzsche said the 'werewolves' were under Bormann's ultimate control (p.51, note 1). In Austrian Tyrol the Americans had trouble with 'werewolves' down to May 1945 (The Times, 26 May 1945). The Fuhrer's address at Rastenburg was, until 20 Nov. 1945, 'Wolfsschanze' (Diary of Hitler's personal servant Heinz Linge, quoted by Roper, p.57). Speer feared they would murder him (p.123).

Lutzow's 'Free Corps' raised against Napoleon I in 1813 at the start of the wars of liberation -- a 'resistance organization' as it would now be called -- in which the German poet Korner served and met his death, was known as Lutzow's wilde verwegne Jagd' ('Wild Hunt'), in transparent allusion to the nightly host following the 'Wilde Jäger', Wodan, hunting by night with his wolves. The black uniform of the National Socialist S.S. (Schutz-Staffeln), the skull and crossbones on their caps -- taken from the regimental badge of the Prussian Black Hussars (Totenkopphusaren) -- are all reminiscent of the nightly terror of the 'wild hunt' and of the skeletons of the dead following in the wake of the 'Wild Hunter' in the clangour of stormy nights.

Editor's Note: As mentioned in footnote 127, the skull and crossbones was the emblem of the S.S. and the Werewolf Corps. This symbol was also the badge of the Knights Templar. Some researchers have found a connection between the Templars and the S.S. There was an Order of New Templars founded in Vienna in 1900 by Lanz Von Liebenfels, which some believe may have been the inspiration for the S.S. Liebenfels had earlier been in contact with Madame Blavatsky and the Theosophical Society -- and in 1918 was involved in the Communist Revolution in Hungary led by the Jew Bela Kuhn.

While some have found a connection between the Templars and the S.S., others have found a connection with the Jesuits. Both the Templars and the Jesuits are servants of the international Zionist conspiracy. So in either case, we have a Jewish connection. Interestingly enough, there is a Templar-Jesuit interface dating back to 1685 when James II became King of England. James placed Jesuits in positions of authority hoping to bring England back to the Roman Catholic Church. He also revived the Order of the Knights of St. Andrew. According to "Rebold's General History of Freemasonry": "The revival of the Order of St. Andrew engendered the Templar system..."

This resulted in the founding of the Order of the Stricte Observance in Germany in 1751 -- a Templar Lodge with heavy Jesuit influence. Count Cagliostro became a member of the Stricte Observance, as did the Illuminist agents Knigge and Bode. The Stricte Observance was the first Masonic body with which the Illuminati of Adam Weishaupt formed an alliance.

This is the tangled web from which the S.S. and the Werewolf Corps may have been derived. For another piece to the puzzle, see the Conspiracy Notes Section of this issue under the heading "Hitler and the Nazis."

CONSPIRACY NOTES

(1) Gnostic Church. On July 26, 1984, Patricia Paredes de Londono was abducted off the streets of Bogota, Columbia by members of the Universal Christian Gnostic Church. Mrs. Londono is a leading member of the Columbian National Anti-Drug Coalition. She was released on August 1. According to New Solidarity: "Despite her continued serious condition, Mrs. Londono has been able to recall important details of the brainwashing to which her captors subjected her, which correspond to the published formulas for 'annihilation of the ego' of the Universal Christian Gnostic Church...Its name notwithstanding, the Universal Christian Gnostic Church is an anti-Christian cult employing barbaric rituals and bizarre sexual practices. The Gnostic Church in Columbia controls the terrorist M-19 band, which is known to finance its weapons purchases by the sale of illegal drugs." (Subscriptions to New Solidarity, 6 months for $15.00, 12 months for $25.00. Published twice weekly. Write: Campaigner Publications, 304 West 58th St. New York, NY 10019.)

(2) STOLEN SKULL. (From Syracuse Herald-Journal, New York, March 27, 1984.) "A human skull was taken from a century-old crypt south of Syracuse. The vandalism and theft at the Walnut Grove Cemetery in the town of Onondaga was reported Monday afternoon to state police. 'It could have occurred anytime this past winter,' said state police investigator Paul Kocher. The skull was taken from one of the bodies in the Archibald Hays family crypt. 'This cemetery, like most cemeteries, has had its share of vandalism, but never anything in this nature,' Kocher said. Police gave the following details: Someone probably used a tool to pry open the metal doors leading to the crypt. The doors were supposed to have been welded shut. Once inside, some kind of tool was used to smash the stone seal on the body's resting place. An iron bar was found lying on the ground inside the crypt. The body was partially dragged from its slot and the skull removed. A man discovered the crypt was disturbed around 4p.m. Monday and reported it to the cemetery caretaker, who then called the police." The reader may wonder why there are so many bone thefts. In the book "Michelle Remembers", we are informed that at certain Satanic ceremonies, a bone must be offered to Satan by each participant.

(3) HITLER AND THE NAZIS. A reader sent us some excerpts from a booklet titled "Alas, Alas, That Great City" by Tom Robison. According to this report, Hitler's platform "included pulling out from under the controls of the international usurpers who had formed twenty-six central banks...and the breaking of these 'manipulators'' power over communism and political Zionism, but he did not advocate world conquest or violence. Hitler was not a violent man contradictory to the picture which has been painted of him by the manipulators he had offended..." Hitler wanted to ally with the U.S. and England, but "an elite group in Germany dubbed the Black Aryan (Nazi) Warlords who comprised the German S.S. gained power. These Black Aryan Warlords advocated the violent conquest of Russia, then Britain, France, and the U.S. but Hitler was blamed for all their machinations." The Grand Orient Masonic Lodges of Germany were the stomping grounds of the Black Warlords. These Lodges "were linked into the so-called 'Jewish' dominated Illuminati network." Hitler was imprisoned earlier because he was the enemy of both the Jewish bankers and the Nazi Warlords. "Hitler was surrounded by special advisors of dubious allegiance throughout the war and by S.S. agents, and was thus cut off from his people." This report may still be available from Duverus Publishing Corp., 1906 Lowell Rd., Springdale, Arkansas 72764 for $3.00. For further research read "Pawns In The Game" by William Guy Carr, available for $4.00 plus $1.00 postage from June Ramsey Library, Rt.3 -Box 1192, Spicewood, Texas 78669. Carr's book covers Hitler and the Nazi Warlords, as well as coverage of the French and Russian Revolutions.

(4) THE ASSASSINS. Conspiracy researcher John Judge has come up with the following information: (a) Must understand that the US intelligence network, and its worldwide network of intelligence operations and connected foreign agencies kill people. They carry out both specific hits on political targets and genocide against general populations. These murders are done abroad and domestically as well. They also have as their goal the control of human minds. What Orwell called "the space between our ears". For thirty years they have experimented on methods of mind control, under the name MKULTRA, and other programs. Again both individual and mass control.

(b) These intelligence networks have a name, CIA, DIA (Defense Intelligence Agency), NSA (National Security Agency), and include a world intelligence network since WW2 that interlinks British, Nazi, US and Russian intelligence operatives. (EDITOR'S NOTE: The reader will recall from past issues that the world's intelligence agencies are patched into the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. See CT #4.)

(c) They are an extension of an international fascist network. Nazi SS men escaped punishment after the war with the help of US intelligence. Spies, scientists and military men went around the world under the cover of the Odessa, Die Spinne, and Kamaradenwork groups set up to save Nazi criminals. 300 Nazi spies under Gen. Reinhard Gehlen formed our CIA and German BND. Hundreds of aerospace, and munitions experts formed our military industrial complex. (EDITOR'S NOTE: These are not the Nazis who are persecuted to death by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Department of Justice. Those who are hounded are the anti-Communist fighters of WW2; while those who gained sensitive posts are the servants of Zionism having come up through the German Grand Orient Masonic Lodges.)

To fund themselves and to maintain control abroad, they also recruited and used trained assassins, mercenaries, provocateurs, and torturers. These people carried out hits, assassinations, paramilitary operations and terrorism, and continue to the present day. They are financed by the international traffick in drugs (esp. opium and cocaine), arms sales and taxes by the governments and military structures they control.

(d) In every major assassination operation the Navy Intelligence group has had a role in the recruiting, training and placement of the killers or the patsies. Other sources include the Green Berets and the Soldier of Fortune mercenary groups.

(e) Recruitment, cover and movement is handled by a combination of dummy front corporations, foreign governments, evangelical operations, and co-operative government officials here at home.

(f) Examples of specific hits: Patrice Lamumba of the Congo, Salvador Allende in Chile (Green Berets), Che Guevara (same), Malcolm X, the Kennedy Brothers, Martin Luther King, and more recent deaths like Congressman Leo Ryan, John Lennon, Ronald Reagan and Pope John Paul II (attempted), and Jessica Savitch and David Kennedy.

(g) Examples of mass murders: Phoenix program in Vietnam, Chemical and Biological Warfare experiments on large populations (Cuba), Jonestown murders, and the continued killing of psychiatric patients (300,000 in Nazi Germany).

(h) Training: London Sunday Times, February 1978, revealed that at a NATO Conference on Stress Reduction, a Navy Lt. Commander Thomas Narut stationed in Naples, admitted to a training program for killers. Candidates were military men already convicted of murder and released for this purpose. Others were chosen based on the use of MMPI psychological tests for a "passive-regressive" personality, or inkblot tests for strong reactions to color (violent). These people were then trained to be part of "combat readiness units", commando operations that would work out of US embassies to carry out political assassinations abroad. Training involved three steps; weapons training, disaffection from the emotional response to violence, and dehumanization of the enemy target in the killer's mind. The disaffection was accomplished by locking their head and eyes in clamps, forcing them to watch films of violence, and asking questions unrelated to the violent acts. Similar to "Clockwork Orange" methods shown in the popular film. Once no emotional response registered to violence, they were ready to be programmed with racist and dehumanizing myths and lies about the target populations involved.
